

JPS

The Journal of the
Polynesian Society

VOLUME 130 No.3 SEPTEMBER 2021

THE POLYNESIAN SOCIETY
THE UNIVERSITY OF AUCKLAND
NEW ZEALAND

THE JOURNAL OF THE POLYNESIAN SOCIETY

Volume 130

SEPTEMBER 2021

Number 3

Editor

MELINDA S. ALLEN

Reviews Editor

PHYLLIS HERDA

Editorial Assistant

MONA-LYNN COURTEAU

Published quarterly by the Polynesian Society (Inc.),
Auckland, New Zealand

Cover image: Robert Carl Suggs cleaning a stratigraphic section at the Ha'atuatua site. Nuku Hiva Island (Marquesas Islands), in 1956.
Photo courtesy Robert Suggs.

Published in New Zealand by the Polynesian Society (Inc.)

Copyright © 2021 by the Polynesian Society (Inc.)

Apart from any fair dealing for the purposes of private study, research, criticism, or review, as permitted under the Copyright Act, no part of this publication may be reproduced by any process without written permission.

Inquiries should be made to:

Secretary
jps@auckland.ac.nz
The Polynesian Society
c/- Anthropology, School of Social Sciences
University of Auckland
Private Bag 92019, Auckland

ISSN 0032-4000 (print)

ISSN 2230-5955 (online)

Indexed in Scopus, Web of Science, Informit New Zealand Collection, Index New Zealand, Anthropology Plus, Academic Search Premier, Historical Abstracts, EBSCOhost, MLA International Bibliography, JSTOR, Current Contents (Social & Behavioral Sciences), ERIH PLUS.

AUCKLAND, NEW ZEALAND

CONTENTS

Notes and News	195
-----------------------------	-----

Articles

ADRIAN YOUNG, MARIA AMOAMO, MARTIN GIBBS, ALEXANDER MAWYER, JOSHUA NASH, TILLMAN NECHTMAN and PAULINE REYNOLDS When Margins Are Centres: De-ranging Pitcairn Island's Place in Pacific Scholarship	197
LINDSAY NEILL and ELIZABETH TOLOKE Lū Sipi: A Marker of Tongan Distinction	227

Shorter Communications

ATHOLL ANDERSON Returning to the Hypothesis of Amerindian Settlement on Rapa Nui (Easter Island)	245
PATRICK V. KIRCH Robert Carl Suggs and the Transformation of Pacific Archaeology: A Retrospective View	257

Reviews

Orange, Claudia: The Treaty of Waitangi/Te Tiriti o Waitangi: An Illustrated History . NICHOLAS JONES	267
Donaldson, Emily C.: Working with the Ancestors: Mana and Place in the Marquesas Islands . CHRISTOPHE SAND	269

NOTES AND NEWS

Contributors to This Issue

Maria Amoamo (Te Whakatōhea) is a Senior Research Fellow in the School of Business at Otago University, New Zealand. Her research interests include cultural and indigenous tourism and sustainable development in small island states with publications exploring themes of imagery and identity, sovereignty and self-determination, and resilience and vulnerability.

Atholl Anderson is an Emeritus Professor, formerly on the staff of the Anthropology Department, University of Otago, and held the Chair of Prehistory in the Institute of Advanced Studies, Australian National University from 1993 to 2008. He has worked extensively in Oceanic archaeology, ethnohistory and palaeoenvironmental studies across the Indian and Pacific oceans from Madagascar to the Galápagos Islands. In retirement his research is mainly in southern New Zealand. He co-authored the multiple-award-winning Tangata Whenua: An Illustrated History with Judith Binney and Aroha Harris (Bridget William Books and Auckland War Memorial Museum, 2014).

Martin Gibbs is Professor of Australian Archaeology at the University of New England (Australia). Most of his work is on historical and maritime archaeology of the Australia-Pacific region, with recent major projects including the failed sixteenth-century Spanish colonies of the Solomon Islands and a reimagining of convict transportation to Australia as an industrial and colonising system.

Patrick Kirch is Chancellor's Professor Emeritus and Professor of the Graduate School at the University of California, Berkeley. He received his PhD from Yale University (1975) and has conducted extensive archaeological fieldwork throughout Melanesia and Polynesia over more than 50 years and published extensively on related topics. His honours include election to the US National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society and the Australian Academy of the Humanities.

Alexander Mawyer is Associate Professor of Pacific Studies, Director of the University of Hawai'i's Center for Pacific Islands Studies, and Editor of The Contemporary Pacific: A Journal of Island Affairs. He has published on the semantics of natural kinds and landscape terms in Eastern Polynesian languages including forests and insular fresh waters, on biocultural indicators for linked human and ecological wellbeing, on Tahitian practices of marine resource governance and on issues of conservation and sovereignty.

Joshua Nash is an islophilic generalist. He was Associate Professor at Aarhus Institute of Advanced Studies, Denmark in 2018–2019 where he wrote about island languages and linguistics and architecture. He now is an Australian Research Council DECRA postdoctoral research fellow at the University of New England, Australia.

Tillman W. Nechtman is a Professor of History and Chair of the History Department at Skidmore College. He is a historian of Britain and its global empire. His research has focused on topics as wide-ranging as eighteenth-century British India and the nineteenth-century South Pacific. He has published in journals like History Compass, the Journal of Eighteenth-Century Studies, and the Journal of Imperial and Commonwealth History. He has published two books with Cambridge University Press: Nabobs: Empire and Identity in Eighteenth-Century Britain (2010) and, most recently, The Pretender of Pitcairn Island: Joshua W. Hill—The Man Who Would Be King Among the Bounty Mutineers (2018).

Lindsay Neill is a senior lecturer in hospitality management at Auckland University of Technology in New Zealand. Lindsay's research interest lies in vernacular and popular culture, particularly food, Kiwi identity and materiality, gastronomy and the music and social influence of The Beatles. Lindsay has published widely on these topics. He is the co-author and author of several books, including the award-winning culinary text The New Zealand Chef.

Pauline Reynolds recently completed a PhD with creative practice about her foremothers who left Tahiti's shores in 1789 bound for Pitcairn Island aboard the Bounty. Her partnerships with curatorial teams around the world explore Polynesian barkcloths and the stories they reveal. She disseminates her research through publications and exhibitions and works with her island community reviving the art of tapa making.

Elizabeth Toloke is a recent graduate from the Auckland University of Technology's Master of Gastronomy programme. Her dissertation topic was on lū sipi and its place in Tongan culture. Elizabeth is keen to undertake further research in the Tongan food space not only as a research interest but also as a way to explore her own Tongan culture. Elizabeth has just enrolled at the University of Auckland to further her studies in a Graduate Diploma in Secondary Teaching.

Adrian Young is an assistant professor at Denison University, where he teaches European history and the history of science. His book project investigates interest in and uses made of Pitcairn and Norfolk Island by outside investigators across the last two centuries. He has recently published an article on hospitality in the history of anthropology and a chapter on the global circulation of "relics" from Pitcairn Island.